

My parents are who I am thankful for. We might not be the richest family in terms of money but we are rich in love. Some families don't have lots of love and support to go around but my family always makes sure that we have lots of it. We may not be the richest family but they always make sure I have everything I ever need or want. They always give me endless love and support. I wouldn't be who I am without them. My mom teaches me to listen and love everyone equally. Some kids don't have a friend that helps you through hard times and she always encourages me to be that friend. She always puts me before herself. I don't thank her enough for that. My dad is always there for me. He taught me strength isn't about muscles. It's about standing up for what you believe in and always using your voice. My parents are always there when I try new things, giving me confidence and the support to do whatever I want. And even if i dont want them to scream across the field hockey field "go bayshore!" they do anyway, Simply being there is always enough for me. They come to every game every meeting, always cheering me on from the sidelines. It's not all the gifts they buy me that i love the most about them, it's the little things that they always remember to do. I always have clean sheets, running water. I always have food on my plate and clothes on my back. And many more little things like packing my lunch at night and filling my water bottle. Their support has given me the wings to soar and my voice to stand up for what is right. Every day, every minute, and every second I am beyond grateful for them. I think every person should have the right to have such amazing parents like mine, Happy Thanksgiving!
