

A Season of Thanks

With rustling leaves and skies of soft grey,
a simple thought, a deep, honest thanks,
drifting through on this crisp day,
about the gifts from life's bank.

It could be the little things we don't notice, waking up in the morning, another chance, another try,
to look up at the world so glorious;
we get to see sudden bursts of sunlit rays.

The kitchen filled with laughter and delight,
while savory aromas fill the hall;
faces full of life, making this scene so bright,
and gather close to respond to the call.

There are many ways to show our appreciation;
we give back with open hearts and hands to all.
This time of gratitude is our motivation
before the winter begins to crawl.