A specific memory from this year that brings you joy or comfort. One memory was one Friday night my cousin was about to leave New York, and he stayed for the night and we ate some pizza and some Pollo Campero. It's connected to my family; also, it was a very cold night, the kitchen door was opened, and I just felt the big impact and I was this close to crying. But when my cousin and my uncle were both about to leave, he gave me his Nintendo Switch. But we're going back to the cold night, and it kinda felt very polar, and we ate and they packed up. We talked for several hours until we went out on the cold night, we took a walk. My cousin matters and my uncle matters to me. They used to babysit me when I was a child, and it was fun. I remember I went to the park and we played for a little bit

Manuel and my uncle angel they were like my brothers that i never had well i do now but when i was a kid they were there for me those two person we like golden for me because how much they cared about me and they used to babysit me and I remember they took me out with my family to eat and we all ate and me and my uncle also cousin we went to see the sunset and see the stars at night and we were at beach the exact time was 5:30 or 6:00 and that part was important because it was very heavy moment for me and i was still a kid .

When we went to the beach and watch the sunset for me its important because it felt the time was gonna come when all the magic was gonna come and they were right and i still remember that moment and for me its motivates and they told me that "everything in life you can achieve by doing the hard work " and i took that quote and put in my mind and as life and its very important for me to never look down on yourself because my cousin and my uncle never look down for them self .

I had changed a lot my attitude my goals and everything and im still growing learning my mistakes and i still think about if i could achieve my goal but i wont give up i really thinked about the quote that my cousin gave me that quote was deep for me i thought that it meant for me that i could do it and my goal is to do my honor all

Finally I hope to see them for the last time because the quote they gave me “everything in life you can achieve by doing the hard work “ and this quote really changed me and i learned that i want to achieve my goal for this year and hope to see them a last time in my life also i appreciate them for being in my life.
