

Gratitude essay

I'm thankful for a lot of things like my family and friends. A lot of things happened over the years causing change, for example a big change in my life was getting a sibling and finding people that I really care about. It is important to be thankful because we don't always get what we want and nothing ever lasts. So I'm really thankful that I met the people I am either friends with or family with because they all mean a lot to me the memories we spend/spent and the fact that they were or are there for me. But there is one specific person that I am extremely thankful for and that is my sister.

My specific special person is my sister, she's young but that doesn't matter .My sister really matters to me because she doesn't know much about life .Also that things aren't always okay but she manages to keep up and she is always there trying to help. If not she's with her cousins she's with me. She matters to me because she is my first and only sibling and she grew up too fast. It's my favorite because it was when she was just born, a baby and I finally met my only sister. It was really that she's kind sometimes and she's always laughing or making people laugh. She is a kindergartener, goes to evergreen of course, kinda tall and she looks innocent and kinda is. One of my favorite memories with her is when I first met her, which was like in 2020, so 4-5 years ago. But another one of my favorite memories with her is when it was her very first day of school. It was special because she's already grown up and already in school, especially in her uniform and how small she is was too much for me to handle.

The reason she matters to me is because she is my family, my other smaller half and I love her very much, like a sister should. This is a reason why she is very special to me and why she matters so much. She makes me feel happy all our memories are special and will always be special to me. She's the best sister I could've asked for. Like she always supports me when I get in trouble, always by my side and like backing me up whenever I'm getting told something.
