Things im grateful for

A specific memory from last year that brings me joy or comfort is when I went to Jones beach. I went to Long Beach with my family and my sister's friends.

Last year I went to Long beach to watch the light show. we saw many different figures or objects made out of light. we saw dinosaurs, Santa, houses, etc. we took pictures and played music on the radio. we also were making faces.

This memory mattered to me because I was with my family having fun. This memory brought me joy because we were having a good time. It also made me joyful because we were looking at the colorful lights. Another reason is because there was Christmas music. Also we were laughing and taking pictures of each other.

The memory helped me grow because it showed me that family is the most important. Also it helped me grow because before I thought they were annoying but I still love them and now I don't think they are annoying anymore. Also before I didn't talk to them as much and I didn't really talk to my sister's friends as much but now I do. Also a goal that I want to achieve now because if that is I want to go every year.

This is why my memory from last year brought me joy and helped me grow. This is why I'm grateful for my family because they have always been there for me. This is why "family is always first"
