

Grades are Great

Grades are an important part of education. In school, every assignment has a grade. Without grades, there is no way to measure the effort put into an assignment. A grade can be high, and a grade can be low. The higher a grade, the better off you will be, which is why I am grateful to have high grades.

To begin, a grade is measured by how much effort you put into completing a task. The harder you try, the higher your grade will be. If you do not try to complete a task correctly, you will not do the task right, and therefore decrease your grade. On the other hand, if you try to do the task correctly, you will do the task at hand correctly, and therefore increase your grade. A verse that sums this up is Ecclesiastes 9:10, which says: "Whatever your hand finds to do, do it with all your might."

Furthermore, grades are important for being successful in everyday life. School is meant to teach you how to do things correctly, so that you can succeed in life. There is an increasing multitude of tasks that require knowing and being able to proficiently perform things that would be impossible to carry out without learning about them in school. A report card shows what you have done in school and how well you have done it. Jobs such as serving in the military require a proficient report card, which is why performing well in school is important.

Lastly, without studying, no matter how much work you put in, you will not know how to carry out your task correctly. Studying is important for things beyond school as well. In certain jobs such as racing, you must study other racers' racing style. Studying is a large part of success. If you study, you will know what to do, therefore, improving your grade strongly.

Grades are important for many things in life. I am grateful for high grades because they open up a whole new world of opportunities. Some jobs will give you a bonus for having high grades, while others will not allow you to join if your grades are insufficient. With a high grade, I am available to contribute to many other things that I am needed for. High grades are important because as life goes on, I will be met with many challenges along the way.
