

Easy as pumpkin pie!

Did you know that thanksgiving is celebrated by 94% of americans, wow thats alot of people but I honestly feel like thanksgiving is celebrated for the wrong reason, you see most people just think its a holiday to eat or in other words have a feast, but the real way to celebrate the holiday is to show gratitude and thanks to the things you love, like your family, pets and more, now I will tell you the thing im thankful for, its a lot of things maybe a whole list but now lets go for a ride a far and a little bumpy ride!

One of the things I'm thankful for is family. Family is one of the most imperative things to me, first my mom treats me so well and teaches me more and more everyday actually more than my own teachers and she cooks good food!, now my dad, he works hard to give me stuff also he teaches me stuff I would need later down the line, they help me and show me new ways and they just don't hand me things they teach me how to go about things and the way I should handle a situation, now you can clearly see why im thankful for my wonderful family.

Another thing, that im thankful for is my friends, my friends give me a sense of confidence in my life, I can always be myself around them, they never judge me for anything they are always there for me when im mad, sad, happy, and disgusted, they always make laugh no matter how I feel with my expression, thoughts, and more but they bypass that by making me feel a type of excitement in my life for once key words for once!, can you see why I'm thankful for my wonderful family/friends? They are second on my list.

The last and final thing im thankful is is new york the home of many and the home to freedom, im really glad i got to live in such a bright city, fun fact new york city is the city that never sleeps, which i get but it's an amazing sight to see with all the structures, each part of new york city is unique in its own way, like time square is such a nice place to visit, new york is the city of opportunities and I hope you know it better than me, again I love living in nyc is a wonderful place full with beautiful structures and opportunities.

As you can see this is all the most imperative things that im thankful for, this is the way we should remark thanksgiving, to be thankful for the things that you have because many other people can be less unfortunate, so please remember these words whoever is reading this, i really hope this message finds you, again if you want a shorter explanation of what im thankful for, I am very grateful/thankful for my family, friends, and the place where I live, I believe those are the most important things to be thankful for.
