

Thanksgiving Day Showcase

Poem by Salwa K. Rifki

Sometimes I forget all my blessings

And all my connections

But here I am, writing a poem of all my appreciation,

And I've got this celebration.

I am thankful for my legs and arms,

My vision and my voice

My life is beautiful, and God made a choice:

I live a happy, healthy one,

And I am settled with many charms.

I am grateful for all the nice people here,

They deserve it all

I am grateful for a cozy home,

And it has a roof to cover my head

Trust me, I know, sometimes we all need a hug

And get a break to notice all the things we have

That some other people don't

So yes, for the best of us, we all should give some respect,

And just accept everything as it is.
