

During this year, I've met many people but none of them stick out like these 2 specific people. They have helped me though thick and thin and have helped me with all the obstacles that have come my way.

Two people who have impacted my life are my cousin Natalie and my friend Anthony. I'm grateful for Natalie because she's always been there for me and always makes sure that everything is going well. We hardly ever argue and she is always open to talk to me. She is and always will be like a sister to me. She is so kind and always makes sure to take care of me. I'm grateful for my friend Anthony because he is always there for me and cares. He always makes sure I'm okay and always is open to talk to me. He is like my brother from another mother. We both have supported each other through everything and he is so special to me. He doesn't compare to any friends I've had in the past few years.

They have both had a huge impact on my life. They both support me with all my decisions and have always been there for me. They are both such a significant part of my life. I don't know what I would do without them. They are such amazing people and I think everyone deserves to have people like them. They both make me feel special and like I have someone to always be there for me. Words can't explain how grateful I am for both of them.

They have both changed my life. They are brutally honest but at the same time it's nice to have people who don't always sugar coat things. One memory I have of Natalie is when she bought me a bunch of things for my birthday and it was things that I didn't tell anyone I liked. She just figured it out by my actions. A memory I have of Anthony is when we were playing a game and then these people were bothering us so he said something to them back. There are many more memories of me and them but those are just one of my favorites. Natalie has impacted my life as well as Anthony but he has also helped with my well being tremendously.

Overall, I'm so grateful for these two people to be in my life. They have helped me overcome many things and will always be there for me like I will them. They are the most amazing and important people I've ever met. They have had a huge impact on my life.
