

For most of my life, I always thought I'd never meet a friend who was honest, kind and not two-faced. That is until I realized I didn't need any friends when God will always be my best friend. In life, you are always going to experience friends who don't show you your worth and push you down. But when it comes to God, I know I can always trust in him. I've always struggled with the kind of person I am, like how I'm too "sympathetic" for my own good. But God truly showed me to put my faith in him and follow his path, not my own.

I am by far the most grateful for my Heavenly Father because he was there when no one else was. He sees my pain and reassures me when I lose my sense of worth. When I've been knocked down so far, he picks me up and increases my faith in him. And the thing I'm mostly grateful for is that he chose to wake me up this morning and every other morning. It is a true blessing to wake up another day blessed by him.

He has brought me through my worst and into my best. And to know I have such a faithful, amazing God waiting for me with open arms is a true blessing. He is truly my only best friend. He is so good to us, and never fails us. Even though we sin and rebel against his word, he still forgives us for the millionth time and that should never be taken for granted.

And that is who I am most grateful for.